

Bootstrap Containers

Containers

Containers are the most basic layout element in Bootstrap and are required when using our default grid system. Choose from a responsive, fixed-width container (meaning its max-width changes at each breakpoint) or fluid-width (meaning it's 100% wide all the time).

While containers can be nested, most layouts do not require a nested container.

  <!-- Content here -->

```

Use .container-fluid for a full width container, spanning the entire width of the viewport.

  ...

```

For Example when we use the grid system as we saw previously you can see that all of these grids were in-fact contained inside a container. And this is really useful because it allows you to horizontally center or to pad out your content and by simply using this container.

Grid:

      One of three columns

      One of three columns

      One of three columns

```

Container, fluid container

```

```

Lorem Ipsum is simply dummy text of the printing and typesetting industry.

Lorem Ipsum has been the industry's standard dummy text ever since the 1500s, when an unknown printer took a galley of type and scrambled it to make a type specimen book.

It has survived not only five centuries, but also the leap into electronic typesetting, remaining essentially unchanged. It was popularised in the 1960s with the release of Letraset sheets containing Lorem Ipsum passages, and more recently with desktop publishing software like Aldus PageMaker including versions of Lorem Ipsum.

```

